HOAGLAND'S
NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!
W. E. COOPER
HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive
Carriage Factory,
Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.
He respectfully refers to the following
CARD.
Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. E. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.
It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.
It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.

NASBY.

NASBY LEAVES MAUCH CHUNK OWING TO A MISTAKE HE MADE IN A FINANCIAL OPERATION—A CHAPTER OF EXPERIENCE IN MISSISSIPPI.

VIXBURG (wich is in the State uv Mississippi), September 25, 1869.

The fact is, I ain't in Mock Chunk any more. The fate which hez follered me for thirty years is after me agin. I made a tolable thing uv it out uv A. Packer, the standard bearer and expense payer uv the Pennsylvany Dimocrisy, so longer I stuck strickly to politicks. I went to his head quarters each day for a week, each time persontatin the cheerman uv a different Dimocratic club, and I so resembled in appearance and style them wich wuz actilly in them posishuns that I got money without difficulty to "be yoosed to carry my ward." Onct I got a hundred dollars to bring down ten repeaters from New York, and other occasions other sums. I personated Executive Committee men from Pittsburg, Scranton, Lock Haven, Kedin, Easton, Allentown, and sich, with distinguished success. Last week, feeling that them caracters wuz too easily assoomed, I essayed suthin more briliyant. Walkin boldly into Packer's Committee room, I announced myself ez a solissiter for a misshun church in Philadelfy. Never shel I forgit the freezin look that wuz given me.

"A mission what?" ejackilated A. Packer's hed man, givin chocks to two gentlemen uv Irish desent from Philadelfy.

I explained that it wuz for a strugglin church I wuz solicitin funds.

"Sir!" sed he, fiercely, "Sir we don't spect no assistance from sich, and hev no money for sich. Show him to the door, Terence, and see that he don't trouble us no more."

And Terence really helped me down the steps with so much alacrity that I notilly broozed myself. It served me rite, though: I mite hev knowed better.

I am, ez the date uv this epistle shows, in Mississippi, where I shel contribit my mite to the elecksbun uv Judge Dent to the Chief Magistracy uv this glorious State. I wuz present last nite at the first meetin uv the campane, where all the candidates of the Conservative Yoonyun party, ez the Democracy call themselves in this secksbun, addressed the masses. The awjence wuz uv all colors. Oh! ez I saw them niggers standin there all together, how I longed to hev em in Kentucky, Ohio or Injiany, where they can't vote, and where it's safe to bust em! But they warnt in Kentucky, Ohio or Injiany; they were in Mississippi, and they hev votes, and consekently I wuz compelled to stand by and treat em ez though they wuz men. Faugh!

Judge Dent made a most tellin speech to em. After remarkin that he wuz a brother-in-law of President Grant (at which the niggers cheered, and the Judge thanked em with ez much grace ez poor Johnson yoost to under similar circumstances), he went on to ask why his colored friends coodent hev confidence in him. He cood put his hand onto his heart and swear he loved em. He wusnt a colored man hisself, but he hed lived amongst em all his life, and hed been nussed at the breast uv a colored woman. Love em! He did love em. There wuz suthin noble about em—suthin uv that ancher which give him confidence in humanity. The Judge devoted the balance uv his time to the most scorchin, witherin, blastin rebook of carpit baggers and carpit baggery I ever heard. When he spoke with contempt uv Northern men which come South for the purpose uv bein nominated for offices, and uv makin speeches in their own behalf, his blood curdled with indignashen.

Ez he concluded, I hollered "Ror!"

The candidate for Treasurer follered. It hed been reported uv him that he wuz at antagonism with the colored people uv the South. Wat falsehood! True, he hadn't colored blood in his veins, but—

"Three sons uv yoors her!" yelled a disgustin carpit bagger, which much disconcerted him ez the crowd uv niggers yelled "Ror!"

The candidate for Auditor uv State asserted that he loved the colored man and believed that he wuz destined to work out his final salvation. He wuz worthy of their confidence, for he wuz proud to say he hed colored blood in his veins, and allus hed. He cood take a Ethopian uv African desent to his buzum and say "brother."

The other candidates were ekally emphatic ez to their affection of a Ethopian. One asserted that his brother wuz a mullatter, and the other remainin vowed that shood they be left disconsolit widowers four hundred times each, they wood every time marry colored ladies.

The Chairman interdoost the candidate for Sekretary uv State. Good heavens! he wuz a nigger—a fullblooded, odorous nigger! a thick lipped, wooly-headed, bow-legged nigger! The nigger shook hands with all the other candidates and made a few remarks, after which I wuz interdoost to the awjence. Ez all uv em hed exprest their undyin love for the ninger, I felt I must. My weakness is dramatic effect. I'm a natural organizer uv tabloo. Seizin that nigger by the hand, I led him to the front uv the stage, and fallin onto his neck, I hed the candidates wave two conservative yunun flags over us, which by accident happened to be confedrit flags. Judge Dent, pointin at us with one hand, exclaimed:

"Democrasy and Ethoopy are hand in hand, hart to hart, 'Ror!'"

It was tough for me, but I endoored it, and the strikin picter wuz cheered vociferously by the black cusses before me.

The meeting ended with three hearty cheers for the candidates, with was jined in principally by the candidates and me.

Judge Dent shood hev given me $10 and sent me North immejitly, but he didn't. He gave me $10 to treat niggers with. Could I waste whisky on niggers, even to confirm the impression left on their minds at the meetin? Never! So that evenin me and four other ardent Democrats from the North took twenty or thirty drinks too much after we hed reached wat ought to hev been our limit, and seein a crowd uv niggers passin, our nachral instinks riz. Ez I saw them the whisky in me biled. Forgettin my affectionate demonstrashen on the platform that afternoon I marched out, followed by my new found friends. Hangin to a lamppost I remarkt to em that they wuz d—d apes.

The trouble with me is, that Democracy aint one and the same thing everywhere. Hed I did in Noo York, or Ohio, or Injeany wat I did in Vixburg, the Democracy would hev rewarded me with a seat in the Legislator, while here it puts me out of favor with the same party. And wat an argement in favor of temperance, when you hev to make sudden changes in business which requires delikit touches. In the North the more likker a man hez in him the better he is fitted for Dimocracy, for it unlooses his lower instinks. Here, alas! the nachral instinck every Dimicrat hez to kill a nigger must be suppresst. Wo is me! I don't beleeve I shel ever do for this secshun.

"You 'scendid from g'rillers, your 'ferior race 'Ror f'r (hic) Dent, and d—n Grant—your not ekal to whites—you aint got no intellek, and you (hic) s-s-tink. 'Rar for Dent! Go for the d—d niggers, boy."

"Kill the d—d niggers," shouted one wich hed participated in the Noo York unpleasantness in 1863, "kill the bloody nagurs!" and echoin his cry, we sailed in.

The Ethiopians wuz surprised. They hed seen me on the stand—they hed observed me shakin hands cordially with Dent and the other candidates, and to be termed d—d niggers, and assaulted in such a manner, wuz too much for em. We didn't vankish them, however. It took a yoonited effort of several policemen and citizens to rescue us from the infoorated wretches, and I write these lines with my hed bandaged, one arm in a sling, and divers other contooshuns. I wud leave here, but my vote is needed to prevent the carpet baggers from triumphin more that it is in Pennsylvania, where it wont do no good anyhow.

Ef I ever doubted the terribull effect uv givin the nigger the ballot, I am now convinst. Instid uv running like sheep or standin with bowed heds tak such blows ez men when conviviully inclined choose to give em, these niggers, puffed up with the idea of ekality, struck out from the shoulder just ez of they wuz men and hed rites. And to see the white men interferin in their behalf agin men uv their own race wuz too sickenin. And this, too, done by Dimocrats! Wat is the country comin to?

Ice Mining in Washington Territory

Letter [illegible] to the [illegible] Engineering and Mining Journal.

I shall say a thing of the scenery of the Columbia river in the present letter. It is one of those themes which need to be treated as the Frenchman made his prime [illegible] the moment of se enthusiasme "and I have had that inspiration pounded out of me by a week's [illegible] travel from the Dalles to this place. Besides, the glories of the Columbia were but partly revealed to my eyes. The smoke of burning forests veiled Hood and Helen and Adams, and only the immediate banks of the river were visible from the steamer. A trip of three days in Washington Territory was full of interest; but the charm of woodcraft, campfire, chinook jargon, and clear mountain lakes and streams, is one which evaporates from ordinary ink. Winthrop used a decoction of dew and fire, instead of ink, when he wrote "Canoe and Saddle," a which ever fresh volume I commend the reader, if he would live over again the scenes of this far Northwest. The very exuberance and extravagance of Winthrop's style, which seem blemishes to the stern parlor critic, are faithful reflections of the mood which this wild life inspires. Read far enough into the book to catch the contagion of its fever ish joy, and you will forget to criticise.

The object of this trip was a visit to an ice mine, or natural cave from which ice is quarried and "packed" on mules and horses to the Columbia river. The business is only profitable in seasons like the present, when a very mild winter has left the ice houses of the settlements half full. The Oregonians rely habitually, with serene improvidence, upon the regularity of their climate; and never look forward to a failure in crops, whether of grain or ice. Two or three times they have been caught in this way, by the mildness of the winter, though, even in a year as unprecedently dry as the present, the harvest of grain does not utterly fail. Now, a dearth of ice is a sad calamity to bar rooms and butter plates, and in this extremity Portland finds relief in cargoes of the precious mineral from more favored northern points, while Dalles City falls back on the cave.

The whole country in the neighborhood of the Dalles is covered with basaltic overflows, interlaced here and there with beds of tufa, cemented ashes, and even altered clays, in some of which interesting tertiary fossils, both of plants and animals, have been discovered. Rev. T. Condon, of Dalles city, a naturalist whose enthusiasm, patient industry, and wide acquaintance with this part of Oregon, entitle him to a fame which his modesty has hitherto avoided, has brought together a large and interesting collection of these fossil remains, which he exhibits and explains with great courtesy to his friends, among whom, with catholic liberality, he appears to reckon all those who make demands upon his time and manifest interest in his pursuits.

It is in these basaltic overflows, not more than twenty miles from the base of Mount Adams, and in the heart, so to speak, of the Cascade Mountains, west of the valley of the White Salmon river, that a series of caves occur, some of which present the curious phenomena of perpetual ice. Nature continues the manufacture, and stores the product, year after year, though it is but occasionally that man, exhausting his own resources, falls back upon her forethought and bounty.

The "caves" are all old lava channels, through which the melted matter flowed, after the crust had cooled and hardened overhead. The same thing may be seen on any volcano; but in most cases, I presume, the molten current gradually clogs and fills the duct, and, cooling, leaves the solid mass. If by any cause, however, the lava should be choked at the source of the stream, I fancy that the portion already in the duct, protected to a great degree from cooling by the solid walls above and on either side, would continue to flow for a considerable distance, and leave an empty space behind it. These ducts may be traced for several miles. The ground reverberates hollowly under the horses' feet; and at frequent intervals, where the crust has broken through by its own weight, the descent may be made over great blocks of basalt into the subterranean glooms. We explored one passage for a distance of seven hundred and fifty feet, and found the fissure still continuing at either end, though too narrow to admit of further penetration. But two or three of these caverns have been found to contain ice, and of these only one seems to afford it in abundance and in accessible position. This one we thoroughly examined, and found the subject, upon closer attention, divested of much of its mystery.

To make an ice cave, it is first necessary to have a cave. This, as we have seen, is provided by the geological formation of the locality. The next requirement is a communication between the cave and the outer air, giving opportunity for the refrigerating drafts of winter. Finally, a slow percolation of water into the cave, which may freeze solid, in successive layers throughout the winter. In summer, the ice thus accumulated thaws slowly under the influence of warmer air entering the cavern; but the thawing at one end produces a low temperature at the other, which preserves the great body of ice. Besides, it is a well-known fact that ice formed at very low temperature will last much longer than that which has barely frozen at 32°. Hence the amount of heat that would liquify river ice only brings the cave ice up to the neighborhood of the freezing point. We satisfied ourselves, however, that the ice in the cave does thaw in summer, and the water finds its way out by subterranean channels.

The ice is of beautiful transparency. Stalagmites are more common than stalactites, or ordinary icicles, in the cave. The largest body of ice lies level like a frozen pool, in the bottom; but here and there it rises into mounds and spires of the clearest crystal. One of these, called "The Iceberg," rises nearly to the top of the cave. We climbed over it, cutting footsteps in its smooth surface with a hatchet, and illuminated it gloriously from behind with our candles.

The total length of this cave is 250 feet in one direction from the hole in the roof through which we descended, and about 500 feet in another direction, at right angles with the first, to a small aperture through which we were able to crawl back to starlight (for our longest exploration was made after nightfall). The width does not at any place exceed thirty or forty feet, nor is the apparent height more than fifteen. I say the apparent height, since it is not known how deep the ice is at the bottom, nor how much the cave is filled up by the falling from the roof of the great masses of rock which now cumber the floor. I do not think the original height was over thirty feet. The ice has been penetrated seven feet only.

The method of mining is very simple, and the packing is both rude and wasteful. The ice is quarried in slabs of 200 lbs. and two of these wrapped in gunny bags are loaded upon each animal. The distance to the steamboat landing on the Columbia is about 35 miles, and the loss in transportation is nearly 50 per cent, which might be greatly reduced by more careful packing. The half-breeds who do the work, however, think it providential that as their beasts grow tired the load lightens, while refreshing coolness is continually distilled upon the toiling creatures below.

It is but a short day's ride from the ice caves to the snow line upon Mount Adams, just below which is the wilderness of flowers, embracing in dwarfed forms of great delicacy and beauty, almost the whole flora of the coast, and peopled with innumerable humming birds, that seek here in August the blossoms that disappeared from the South in June.

An excursion to the caves and Mount Adams, though out of the beaten track of the tourist, is a delightful thing. Even ladies of ordinary endurance can make it without discomfort. And if you would set upon the whole a crown of delight, stop on your return at the beautiful ranch of J[illegible] near the mouth of White Salmon, enjoy his society, and revel in the delights of fish, milk, cream, and "hyas closh muckamuck," as gone, dear reader, expressive of excellent good eating, which his good husbandry and Mrs. J[illegible]'s housewifery produce.

I have said nothing of the Indians, the trout, the huckleberries; but I have said enough for the present. Who would know more let him "klose [illegible] yuquo," or, haply, his hither, and see.

Methodist papers in England are gravely discussing the question whether local preachers do right in making use of the velocipede in reaching their houses of worship on the Sabbath. The judgment seems to be that it is better to walk than to ride where it is practicable, but that the bicycle should be used in preference to the horse.

Late Hours and their Lesson.

The English papers announce that the Countess of Jersey gave a "breakfast" at four o'clock in the afternoon. The perversion of terms in the above statement is a little, but not much more absurd than calling afternoon entertainments matinees—the last named word as our readers do not need to be told, indicating a morning occurrence. Did our people generally postpone their dinner until 6 or 7 P. M., as is the fashion in Europe, usage would justify denominating the interval between rising and dining—morning. The term matinee is absurd, however, when used by persons who have eaten a noon day meal.

As society grows artificial, late hours become fashionable. In the days of the Lancastorian Kings of England four centuries ago, the royal household breakfasted at 4 A. M., dined at 11, and supped at 4 or 5 in the afternoon, and were safe in bed by 8. One great reason for the gradual adoption of later hours was the fact that extra fine dinners required in old times as now, a more elaborate and prolonged preparation than ordinary repasts. As the givers of dinners were people of rank and fashion, their practices became regarded as the inseparable characteristics of gentility. Their humbler imitators followed their example, by eating their meals a little later in the day.

The fashionables, anxious to preserve the distance between themselves and the "lower classes," made another move ahead, and so the process went on, until now old world revelers begin their entertainments very near the end of the evening. Artificial, however, as are their habits, the social knight owls of Europe do not rival the ancient Romans. In the wicked days of the empire, the Senatorial and equestrian voluptuaries used to make ten in the evening the hour for getting up. The ordinary turning of night into day involved too much "early rising" for their jaded frames.

There is little danger of Americans reaching this extreme, for most of our people have to work in the day, however much they may seek pleasure at night. Still, the necessities of business and the demands of enjoyment could be much better met were our social entertainments begun and [illegible] more seasonably. There is no reason why the guests at a party should not gather by 8, or a little later, and be safe at home by midnight. Were this reform instituted, both guests and hosts would have more enjoyment, and less of next day headache and hypochondria. Waste of health is worse than waste of money, and all persons who, like Mrs. Gilpin, are on "pleasure bent," should with her have "a frugal mind."—Cincinnati Gazette.

WHY WASHINGTON IRVING NEVER MARRIED.—About the bachelorhood of Washington Irving there always hung a cloud of mystery, which even his familiar acquaintances tried in vain to dispel. But the grave, that more generally hides than discovers the well-kept secrets of a lifetime, having just closed over the late Mrs. Rebecca Gratz, of Philadelphia, a Hebrew lady of exemplary goodness, and who was noted for the greatness of her bounty to all poor and needy persons—we are informed that she was the occasion of Irving's single life. In regard to the matter, a correspondent of the Jewish M[illegible] writes:

"Twenty years ago I heard the story, a story that has long been current in Philadelphia, in Jewish circles, among her friends and acquaintances, and which has again been revived here since her death. It runs thus: Many years ago, when Miss Gratz was a young girl, Washington Irving, then already risen in literary reputation came to Philadelphia, and became a visitor at the house of her family. It is said that in youth she was very beautiful and very good; and as her acquaintance with Irving increased, the beauty of both her character and her features, together with the fact that she was a living representative of that nation whose whole history is romance, so wrought upon his heart that he became deeply enamoured with her. It is needless to say that had his attachment been ever so strong, with her strength in her faith, it would have been wasted. As it was, it was wasted. Irving left the city, but did not forget the lady of his love."

But the romance does not end here, for the correspondent says that when Irving met Sir Walter Scott abroad, he told him the story of his attachment to the beautiful and good Jewess of Philadelphia. At the time, Scott was about to write the novel of "Ivanhoe," and he was so impressed with the portraiture of the object of Irving's love, who, though loving, was still so faithful to her religion, that he gave to his heroine the name of Rebecca. True or not, the story is a beautiful one, and there is nothing in it that is not honorable to all concerned. Miss Gratz died aged eighty-eight years.

THE PLACE FOR BACHELORS.—Natal, an English Colony on the southeast coast of Africa, is a fine place for old bachelors. It is inhabited by natives and English, there population being somewheres near 200,000 including 10,000 whites. It is a "white man's government," but the subjects are decidedly mixed. The Bulletin, in an article on Natal and Polygamy, says:

They sought to regulate and tax it and its abuses out of existence. To stop the auctions, they fixed the highest price at which a wife might be sold at ten head of cattle. For second and third rate wives, however, so far as we can see, an auction might still be necessary to get them off the hands of their managing papas or mammas, whomever arrange such bargains. Then to discourage, while they did not absolutely forbid the practice, they taxed the husband for all wives he had besides the first, according to a sliding scale, ten dollars per head being added for every one additional. Whether the Tax Collector would levy on the wives of the delinquent and sell them to raise to the tax and costs, if it remained unpaid, is not stated. The tax may operate to discourage polygamy by making it too expensive, but once paid there can be no further legal objection to the having of more than one wife. English law apparently legalizes it.

AN ANTIQUATED IDEA.—The October number of the California Teacher, contains besides the record of the Institute, some original papers on subjects connected with education. In one of them the writer takes strong ground against the practice of offering rewards in schools, and touches on some defects in home as well as in school education. He or she says:

Many parents cannot induce their children to go to school in the morning without offering some payment, and at evening no lessons will be learned until the accustomed promise is enacted. Now this may all be accordance with the spirit of the age, but when we bring down to the level of the dollar and cent all personal politeness, accommodation, generosity and duty, we are striking a level that will yet make this nation but "tinkling brass." Nearly all of the discipline in our public schools and homes is on the principle of barter! My son be good, and I will give you a "new gun," or, my daughter, be good, and you may go to the theater with us. The absolute right to recognize the proper authority of parents is nowhere taught to-day. The idea is antiquated.

WEDNESDAY MORNING OCTOBER 20 1869

The Church as an Instrument of Progress

We have been favored with a printed copy of the Minutes of the Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the Siloam Association of Regular Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon, Held with Molalla Church, Clackamas county, Commencing on Friday the 3d of September 1869 and continuing the two following days. A careful perusal of this pamphlet will, we are satisfied, conduce to the edification of every reader and give him new views of the agency of the Church in enlightening the world. We pass by the common details of the proceedings on the occasion, and come to the Circular Letter, which is addressed to the brethren, since it is in this document that the light of the gospel shines with uncommon brilliancy and power. The letter covers twelve closely printed pages, and is signed by "A. Gregg, Moderator, and A. Miller, Jr., Clerk." The first part of it appears to be devoted to the disputations of polemical theology, with which we have nothing to do; but in the last part the spiritual doctrines of hard shell politics, cooked up in the cauldron of pro-slavery Democracy, and sauced with the preserving juices of pulpit eloquence, are set forth in such a manner that no one can pass them by. To the Siloam Association away up on Molalla the world is indebted for a new interpretation of St. John's Revelation. The "first beast," we are informed, is papal Rome; the "second beast" is—what does the reader suppose? The second beast is "Abolitionism!" It appears that the Siloam Association propose to enter the arena for a contest with this "beast," confident of their power to vanquish him. They claim to have a command from Heaven to destroy him, and they exhort the whole hard-shell confraternity to give him no quarter. From this ludicrous jumble of Scriptural misquotations and sing-song Democratic oratory, we make a few extracts. The first is by way of exhortation to the brethren:

> For the voice of God is audibly calling, and shall not his voice be heard? "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues." And shall he call in vain? or shall his people remain guiltless when they turn a deaf ear to his irrevokable call, saying, "A little more sleep, a little more slumber, and a little more folding the hands to gether for sleep"? If we declare a non-fellowship for Abolitionism by our practical acts and deeds (though we are satisfied that it is not in its principles and practice in opposition to the Word of God) we fear that it will rend the churches asunder, and the great mass will be against us. Therefore we must wait till the time will come when such a move will be more popular, and will not cause us the loss of so many precious brethren! Beloved brethren, such is carnal reasoning, and is the suggestions of the devil, to induce you to disobey the command of God. Shall we suffer evil principles and practices to remain in the church of God, that good may abound? God forbid.

Which being rendered into plainer English signifies that the test of fellowship and of orthodox standing in the "Siloam Association of the Predestinarian Baptists of Oregon," is to vote the Democratic ticket without scratching! The authors of this apostolical letter then go on with an anathema against the Union League, Provost Marshals, and "all the unholy fruits of Abolitionism," and having argued these matters in a style which was made familiar to everybody by Democratic orators five or six years ago, they come back to the "religious" aspect of the question, and show that the brother who fails on any occasion to do his whole duty by voting a straight Democratic ticket, can never hope to see salvation. The argument on this point is a little tedious and is wrought out with sublime indifference to the elementary principles of English grammar, but we have no doubt our readers will deem it worthy of perusal:

> Now when the advocates of Abolitionism are confronted with the word of God, and cut off from their false plea of fellowship in the house of God, they are frank to acknowledge that the principles and practices of Abolitionism is contrary to the word of God,—(See 1st Tim. 6. 1—5, inclusive and Titus 2 9)—and teaches a doctrine contrary to the laws of Jesus Christ, as laid down for the government of his church. But, they say, we are no Abolitionists; but we have the constitutional right, as citizens of this world, to exercise the free right of the elective franchise at the ballot box in Cæsar's kingdom; and if the church of Christ meddles with the right, or debars us from the political privilege of supporting whom, or what measure soever we please at the polls, they are making politics a test to fellowship in the church. And yet, because you have the constitutional right to go to the polls and there vote for the support of our earthly government, you plead justification under the false plea of having the right to go into Cæsar's kingdom and do what you know to be wrong in Christ's kingdom. Now this is not so. For in the first place you admit that the principles and practice of Abolitionism is wrong, and is contrary to the laws of Christ's kingdom. And can you, as a christian, under the false plea that you are not an Abolitionist, go to the polls and there support that principle which you acknowledge to be wrong by voting for it? for you must know that as it has assumed a political shape in order to secure the political power to enforce its wicked practices, that its life is centered in the ballot box, and when you lend it all your influence there, that you give life and vitality to it, and thereby give it life and animation, and enable it to do wrong! which at once constitutes you an Abolitionist! and at once makes you chargeable in Cæsar's kingdom with a known wrong committed in Christ's kingdom. Now this is claiming the right to do wrong. Your constitutional right that you claim, contemplates only that you have the right to go to the polls and there support by your vote constitutional [illegible] for the support of your constitutional government; and gives you no right to support any measure for the overthrow of that government. For it is your bounden duty, as a christian, to render obedience to the authorities or laws of God for our government as citizens of this world. And you have no justifiable right either in the eyes of the laws of Christ or the laws of the land, to do the contrary. For illustration:—A brother has the right to go to town on lawful business; but because he had the right to go there, does not give him the right to become intoxicated on liquors, or to gamble for a wager, and thereby commit an offence against the laws of Christ's Kingdom. And if the church exclude him from their fellowship, upon your principle of argument, they would be meddling with his rights as a citizen? when in reality it would only be forbidding him the right to do wrong.

We are therefore solemnly informed that the "Siloam Association" when they forbid a brother to vote for Abolitionism are simply forbidding him to do wrong, just as they forbid him to get drunk or indulge in gambling. Therefore the way to Heaven from the Molalla, according to the doctrines of the Siloam Association, is through the Democratic party. It may be seriously doubted whether the waters of the original pool of Siloam could open the eyes of such bigotry and enable it to see.

All there is in the Chinese labor question of which the opposition attempt to make so much is simply this: By Chinese labor the Pacific States are enabled to open new sources of wealth which have heretofore formed no part of our system of general development; and thus so far from crowding white laborers out of employment, will actually open up the country and create new avenues of industry for white men where they now find nothing to do.

The judicial election in California will take place to-day. Republican candidates for Supreme Judges are Sawyer and Pratt; Democratic candidates are Crockett and Wallace. The vote will probably be a very light one.

The Handiwork of the Scurvy Politician

The Herald again concentrates its intellectual powers on the labor question as presented by the workingmen's association of East Portland. It expresses the profound opinion that it behooves workingmen to organize in favor of liberty, and a few lines further on it repeats the sage observation that it is time Americans were organized to resist the progress of anarchists. The platform adopted at East Portland the Herald says is "a good one and if strictly adhered to must soon result in attracting every laboring man and mechanic to the society. Stuff and nonsense!" The platform in every leading feature is that of the repudiation Democracy. It is a condensation of Pendleton's demagogical speeches embodying all the absurdities, falsehoods and dishonest propositions with which that now defeated and condemned leader of the repudiation Democracy has been accustomed for years past to interlard his specious harangues. It was gotten up by a few small beer politicians who hope to use such movements for political effect. The Herald pretends to protest against this feature of it and hence we find that paper saying:

> The workingmen of East Portland have made the mistake, however, of appointing other than workingmen on committees. An organization of workingmen should be controlled by workingmen alone. If lawyers, or doctors or politicians are conspicuous in the Society, and seem to control it the thing will look like a humbug.

The verdancy of this statement is amusing. The movement was not started by workingmen, but by politicians. Workingmen had little or nothing to do with it. The whole thing was engineered by a few political bankrupts who are extremely anxious to mend their decayed fortunes. The Democratic party at this time is not rich in materials for political campaigning; hence its curb stone statesmen and precinct politicians are in sore straits for issues. In this dilemma they start such movements as that originated in East Portland by the three Democratic lawyers of this city. The Herald is right when it says that a movement so started and conducted "will look like a humbug." Self respecting workingmen never originate such humbug platforms as that prepared by the three lawyers of this city and adopted by them as an expression of the views of the workingmen of East Portland. Your scurvy politician is the only person equal to that sort of thing.

In General

The defeat of Pendleton seems to be producing a serious effect upon the Democratic newspapers of Oregon. Simultaneously with its occurrence the Herald fails on its Sunday Leader, the Eugene Guard comes out with a half sheet, and the Salem Press is so badly used up that it misses publication entirely. These be sad portents!

The following from the Eugene Guard is a specimen of the "powerful" writing in which the columns of that high-toned Democratic journal abounds: "Heavens and earth! or rather hell and damnation!—the people taxed a hundred and forty millions to degrade themselves to a level with the lowest of all human kind—every laboring man must give a portion of his day's toil to mate his children with niggers!" If such writing as this will not bring up the Democratic cause that cause must be low indeed!

The Herald adjures some of the workingmen of East Portland to join the "labor" movement started by the three Democratic lawyers, so that the OREGONIAN will have no opportunity to cast "slurs" on the said movement. This is good. Will not somebody help those three oppressed laboring lawyers out of their distress? They are making unprecedented sacrifices in the cause of workingmen, but are likely to live and die unappreciated by those for whom they undertake such great labors! What ingratitude!

The Herald, in order to defend its party from the charge of having adopted a "nigger policy" in Mississippi, denies that Judge Dent is a Democrat. It says he is a "National Republican." Faugh! Names are nothing. If he is not a Democrat why did the Democratic Committee of Mississippi refuse to call a Convention to nominate a ticket, and urge every Democrat to vote for Dent? The Democratic party of Mississippi is supporting Dent for Governor unanimously, and will vote en masse for a negro for Secretary of State.

Mr Seward no doubt is at the capital of Mexico by this time. In view of his services as our Secretary of State in sticking to Juarez and negotiating the French out of Mexico, no doubt he will be welcomed with general enthusiasm by the Mexican officials and people at every point of his journey. At the capital he will find the Mexican Congress in session. Finally, as Mr Seward is not averse to Mexican annexation, who knows, says a leading Eastern paper, but this pleasure excursion may plant a stepping stone or two in that direction?

The Powell Expedition—What It Saw and Did

[From the Deseret Evening News, Sept. 15.]

Major J. W. Powell, chief of the Colorado River Expedition, accompanied by his brother, Captain W. H. Powell, arrived in this city last evening, having performed his task and made a complete exploration of the path pursued by that steamer.

We gather from his conversation, in which we were very much interested, a few of the features of his journey, which we lay before our readers to whom everything connected with the Colorado river is interesting.

After the accident to the boat, an account of which has already appeared in our columns, the party performed a land journey of about thirty miles to the Indian Agency, where, after obtaining three sacks of flour and other supplies, they again started down the river, passing through a canyon which, from the entire absence of vegetation, they named the Canyon of Desolation, and had a pleasant trip until they reached the junction of Green and Grand Rivers. Upon leaving the junction of Green and Grand they entered Cataract Canyon, so called from being filled with cataracts, the latter being so numerous that the average distance between them is not more than a half a mile. From a point fifty miles below the junction of Grand and Green rivers the canyon is broken by a lateral valley coming in from the southeast.

On leaving Cataract the party entered a canyon about twelve miles long, which they named Narrow Canyon, at the foot of which they found a very dirty stream, upon which some of the men bestowed the euphonious name of "Dirty Devil Creek." From this creek they entered Mound Canyon, the sides of which are composed of beautiful mounds of orange colored sandstones, which have been formed by the erosion of the water. In this canyon they continued to the mouth of the San Juan, another dirty stream running from the west.

Leaving the San Juan they entered Monument Canyon, containing many monuments of red sandstone formed by the same agencies as the mounds of red sandstone in the other canyon. They next reached the Paria, or Elk river. From there to the mouth of the Little Colorado the party passed through Marble Canyon, so named because the rocks forming the sides of the canyon consists of variegated marble—white, slate, gray, cream colored, pink, purple and chocolate, beautifully polished by the action of the waves. Probably no finer marble can be found in the world than in this canyon.

From the Little Colorado the region for about ten miles has been disturbed by ingenious agencies, lava being scattered over the rocks, showing at some period the outburst of a volcano, the location of which they were unable to discover. Leaving this region they entered the Great Canyon of the Colorado, which makes three bends to the south and three corresponding bends to the north, swinging around to the mouth of the Virgen, its general course being west, the distance to the mouth of the Virgen river in a direct line, is about 140 miles, but by the river, owing to the sinuosity of its course, nearly 300. The walls of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado have a granite base, the floor of the river being granite, and they are surmounted by marble cliffs; the granite base varies from a few to 800 feet in hight above the granite base tower marble walls to the hight of 2,000 feet. This canyon extends to Spanish Valley, about forty miles from the Virgen, and the party were upwards of three weeks traversing it.

The country throughout the entire length of the river traversed by Major Powell, is rocky, and characterized by an almost entire absence of timber. There is no country on its banks susceptible of settlement. The peculiar color of the Colorado from which its name arises is owing to the washing of the red sandstone forming Mound and Monument canyons, but the water in many places varies, being gray, green or red according to the color of the rocks in the vicinity.

The men who left the expedition, who, it is supposed, have since been killed by the Indians, separated from the party when about forty miles above the foot of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. They left because the cataracts ahead were, in their opinion, too dangerous to descend. On making their descent, however, they were found not to be as bad as had been anticipated. Two miles below these the party had encountered another and worse series of rapids and falls, which, as the Major states, were run by accident, and made safely. Thence to the mouth of the Virgen they had smooth sailing, and no more difficulty.

The threatened split in the ranks of the Wisconsin democracy was averted by the defeat and the complete surrender of the old party managers. There were the direst threats of insubordination in case the Madison regency succeeded in the convention. That wing of the party made a strong effort to retain power, but was overthrown by the vigorous attack of the progressives. The candidate for Governor is more in advance of his party elsewhere than General Rosecrans. He was editor of a democratic paper which waged war more fiercely against the democrats of the Eldridge and "Brick" Pomeroy stripe than against the republicans, and during the rebellion Southern voted the republican ticket more than once. In the convention and after the nomination one speaker remarked that Mr. Robinson had not always been true to the party, but he hoped he was all right now. The republican papers say that not only was he out of harmony with his party during the war, but that he is now politically on the fence, and they say that the rest of the ticket is weak. The principal resolution of the platform, which has already been published, is little more than an attempt to get upon the ground occupied by the republicans, but the candidates need exercise little hypocrisy in endorsing it, whatever must be said of other leaders and of the rank and file of the party.

Chicago vs San Francisco

[From the Sacramento Bee.]

It will be remembered that some months ago a party of merchants came out to this State, were feted and lionized in the most approved California style, and on their way home stopped at the principal towns along the route. There they made arrangements with business men to secure their trade, and the consequence is that Virginia, but a few hours from San Francisco, is now receiving regular consignments of merchandise from Chicago. So is almost every town of any size in Nevada, even those almost at our doors. If San Francisco merchants would look after the interests of the mercantile community more closely and pay less attention to the prices of stocks and brokers' operations, they might retain some of the trade which is now fast slipping from their fingers. Even the business men of Sacramento should make an effort for more of the Nevada trade than they have heretofore had. It seems to us that the rates of freight from here to Nevada ought to enable them to compete with Chicago over two thousand miles distant. The difficulty must lie in a lack of that enterprise and shrewdness exhibited by the Chicago merchants who came right into our camp, so to say, and took from before our eyes what we most depended on for our subsistence. How would a raid by California merchants do into the sagebrush country? They must do something or ship their goods back to New York.

Quite Wrong.—The general editor of the Commercial indulged, last evening, in some strictures upon the State Fair and its management which the Society [illegible]. We quote a paragraph: "It is very apparent that this fair together with the county fairs have degenerated into mere training grounds for one half-dozen jockeys who travel from one to the other with a half score of second-rate horses and carry off premiums over and over again for the same stock. We observe the same horses taking the leading purses and premiums year after year and the same patch and shell work always on hand while what is really for the interest of Oregon to cultivate and improve is overlooked by the manipulators of the premium list and most contemptible sums set opposite them. The farm products are nearly ignored, but let a sharper bring a Cayuse on the ground, christened with a slang name, and his trainers get a fair sweep at any treasury where 'horse' rules."

There is some truth in the general accusation that the premiums on horse racing are disproportionably large, but it is not true that the State fair has degenerated into mere training grounds for one half dozen jockeys. We confess to having scolded the managers at various times about the tendency of their management to make the fairs a horse racing season. We confess to having opened our report of the late fair with such a growl, but after all, we were, in common with everybody else, most happily disappointed in the subsequent results. The fair was an excellent one for farmers and mechanics. It is true the races attracted great attention and drew off from the Pavilion great multitudes of people; but the main part of the farmers and mechanics and artisans of the State gave their principal attention to the agricultural and mechanical departments. These latter departments were filled with an admirable show of Oregon products and manufactures and exhibited such an array of inventions as was most highly creditable to the State. The exhibition was such as to place the horse racing more nearly in a secondary position than at any fair probably ever held on the Pacific coast, and such as to cheer the hearts and lift the hopes of all the substantial farmers and mechanics and all other classes who instead of being "jockeys," are devoted earnestly to the advancement of the material interests of our State. It is more than injustice to these men to say that their efforts have only added in making the State Fair a mere training ground for jockeys—it is an outrageous wrong.

Oregon Inventions at the California Fair.—The Mining and Scientific Press of October 9, has a "Review of the Fair" lately held at Sacramento, in which are noticed several Oregon inventions, and most of them in favorable terms. Of Mr. John W Sutton's Dynamometer the Press says: "To the machinist Sutton's dynamometer [illegible] machine. We are told that no rough work to which steam gearing may be applied is so rough as to [illegible] the dynamometer from showing always the exact [illegible] of power used. It might for example be used for measuring the power used by the revolving cutters of the Standish steam plow. Questions of great importance as to comparisons of power in machine building may be determined with it by ocular demonstration." Of agricultural implements the Tustin Champion Gang Plow, and the Watson gang, are mentioned—both invented and patented and owned at Portland. The Press says: "Of seed sowers we have also a variety. Mr L. D. Sawyer exhibits Finlayson's broadcast seed sower, an Oregon invention. Much merit appears to be justly claimed for this sower, and the agent proposes to give a public exhibition of its merits outside of the Pavilion, in a few days, at which competition will be freely invited." Mr Finlayson is a resident of Linn county Oregon. His sower took first premium at the Oregon State Fair last year. Among other things from Oregon in the agricultural department, the Press notices a patent milking apparatus, exhibited by L. L. Sawyer, of Clatsop county, and a patent apple [illegible], by John Nestor of Portland. In the department of naval architecture, were several models of [illegible] steamers, of which the Press says: "The best rigged model in the Fair, is that of Peter Gadrich, which is an artistic piece of work, made at Coos Bay, Oregon, where our better quality of coal comes from."

Sociable.—The sociable at the Unitarian chapel last evening was well attended and was a pleasant reunion.

Harry Wood wishes it distinctly understood that he has not sought the nomination tendered him for Chief Engineer.

Capt. Dodd's house was robbed Sunday night of a large amount of provisions.

The steamer Telfair will sail for Victoria on Saturday [illegible].

Yesterday was another blustering and cold day, the thermometer being as low as fifty six degrees.

The total number of entries at the State fair footed up [illegible], of which over 2,390 were by lady competitors.

Prof. [illegible] will give a series of entertainments in [illegible], rope tying, etc, in the course of a few days.

Mr. M. Scott of this county took the first premium at the State fair for the best cheese on exhibition.

There was only one case of assault and battery tried before the P[illegible] yesterday morning.

Tom Thumb, Warren and Commodore Nutt were visible two or three times on the street yesterday, creating a [illegible] wherever they went.

The steamship Oriflamme was detained last evening [illegible] hour in the evening by the late arrival of the [illegible] boat.

Mr. M. Campion, by the burglary of Sunday night lost [illegible] in coin besides the property mentioned yesterday.

Thieves are reported operating at Sauvies Island. One man is said to have lost $290, and another $300.

[illegible]—The following items are from the Mountaineer:

[illegible] to notice an increase in transient travel.

[illegible] Superintendent of the Indian Department left with [illegible] on Wednesday last.

[illegible] and lady left for the East. Joe has [illegible] sixteen years.

[illegible] and family passed through here a few days ago, with a [illegible] of men. The Major takes command [illegible] county.

Mrs. St. Clair and Miss Iva Brearly gave us a very [illegible] entertainment on Saturday evening. They started to Walla Walla on Monday.

A man by the name of Kerloper fell from an ox wagon [illegible] days since, the wheel passing over him dislocating [illegible] and breaking his arm.

On [illegible] day night the house of Mr G Sylvester on the bluff, was entered by a burglar through one of the [illegible]. The noise awoke the wife, she called to her [illegible] and when he got to his chamber door the burglar [illegible] dark lantern; but Mr S having no arms [illegible] did not think it prudent to attempt to arrest [illegible] his chamber door and the burglar fled, [illegible] made his appearance again about 4 o'clock in the [illegible] and finding the inmates awake he left for Judge [illegible] but the Judge's dog attacked him, the burglar shot at the dog with his pistol and fled.

Oro Fino Theatre.—The winter season of theatricals [illegible] last evening at Oro Fino Theatre, by the [illegible] Company—the plays selected for the occasion being the beautiful comedy of "The Honeymoon" and the farce of the "Loan of a Lover." The house was well filled and the audience was quite as appreciative as it is used to be at Oro Fino. Mrs Carter exhibited some very pretty pieces of acting in "The Honeymoon" as the proud [illegible] beauty, wooed and won by the [illegible]; again as the supposed wife of a peasant learning the hard lesson of wifely obedience; and still again as the wife who elects to stay with the man who taught her the dearest lesson a woman can know—to love, honor and obey her husband rather than to go back to affluence and soulless splendor, with her father. In the "Loan of a Lover," Miss Carter's natural vivacity makes her inimitable. Mr Carter was warmly applauded in several passages, which he rendered very effective. Mr. Barry, as usual, proved that he is a favorite with the Portland public. It is almost certain that if he appears, the audience will laugh whether he says a word or not. Miss Cummings had but a mediocre character to display, but she evinced some culture and improvement since she last appeared in this city. To-night the comedy of "The Lady of Lyons" and the farce of "A Jealous Wife"—a good bill.

Still Another Burglary.—The cellar of Mr C H Lewis was broken into during the night of Monday, and robbed of some brandy, wine and provisions. The wife of one of the neighbors, about one o'clock saw the [illegible] of a light, and supposing that burglars might be about, waked her husband. The latter getting up saw a man go to the cellar door of Mr. Lewis' house and try the knob and then go off up the street. Supposing then that the man was a policeman, the neighbor retired to bed. The man he saw, however, was probably one of the gang who, later in the night, robbed the premises. Burglaries, robberies and thefts are becoming alarmingly frequent. The city seems to be thronged with thieves who take what they can lay their hands upon. Cannot the police force be strengthened so as to give less chance for these marauding expeditions? Those who have been robbed, and perhaps many others are prepared to give a warm reception to thieves when they come and every body should be ready to make one or two scoundrels less in this world whenever they make their appearance in private houses in the night. If the present state of things continues, no one need be surprised if a vigilance committee should start suddenly into existence and make short work. The rogues may as well beware how they try honest people's patience.

Passengers for California.—The steamship Oriflamme sailed for San Francisco last evening, taking the following named passengers: G S Wright, Capt T Wright, Mrs Mulkey, J J Tracy, Miss Flynn, Miss Lena Swett, Mrs Jane Pyle, M Barrett, Mr Allen, J E Bull, C A Reynolds, L Henshaw, M [illegible], A Ferguson and lady, W S Blecker, Mrs S Blecker, Mrs Stratton, Miss Minnie Warren, B S Hel[illegible], Gen Tom Thumb, Commodore Nutt, F Gatens, wife and 3 children, F G Robles, C E Culer, Mrs Richardson, [illegible] McCarty, Mr Banks, F S Aiken, W J Callinghan, M [illegible], L B Martin, D Martin, H W Sloane, Caleb Rand, W Carrier, C W Shireley and wife, B H McCal[illegible], D Libby and wife, C Curtis, W L McClintock, E Gerr[illegible], Isadore Fox, J B Brinton, J F Murtagh, C O Olock and wife, Miss P Nowell, Miss Flora Cheadle, Miss Mary [illegible], Mrs Shaw, Jas S Smith, F J Jeffrey, wife and child, F H Steele, C L Montieth, Andrew Danley, Mrs Hitchcock and child, Miss Jenny Brown, Miss Bailey, Miss S Barstow, Mrs L Darmina, A H Wass, V Dyer, J E McMurray, Mrs Mary Smith, Mrs Poe, M Sim[illegible], Henry M Mulkey, M S Daily, wife and 3 children, Miss M E Belknap, Mrs A Belknap and 2 children, Wells Fargo & Co's messenger and 30 in steerage.

Statistics.—Mr O J Carr furnishes the Statesman with the following statistics of Marion county: Total assessment of Marion county $[illegible]; number of [illegible] 1,720; number bushels of wheat raised last year 421,400; number bushels of oats 314,626; number pounds of wool clipped, 171,109; number of cattle 4381; horses exclusive of colts, 6,848; sheep 20,7[illegible], exclusive of lambs. Mr Carr inquired about the loss of wheat by the rain and from all the information he could gain he estimated the damaged wheat at 150,000 bushels, most of it, however, has been turned to some account either for food or market in some shape or other. This will swell the wheat total to over half a million bushels and not a good year for wheat either.

The Ball.—There was a gay and festive throng at the Armory last night, on the occasion of the Odd Fellows' Ball. The dancing was continued till a late hour or rather an early hour this morning, the guests appearing to enjoy themselves highly.

From Astoria.—From our regular correspondent October 18th.

A lad of about 11 years of age, only son of Capt. Riddell, one of the owners of the saw mill at Brookfield, shot himself accidentally yesterday, while engaged in drawing out the load of a rifle. He had carelessly forgotten to remove the cap, and by some unknown accident it exploded and sent the contents of the rifle through the body of the unfortunate boy. He was still alive when last heard from, but suffered greatly and was not expected to live.

The Illinois schooner Champion arrived here yesterday from Portland and proceeded to sea to-day with a fair wind. She has most delivered [illegible] this time.

The bark Lookout went to sea yesterday with a fair wind. It has been blowing quite a gale from the northeast the last thirty six hours.

There is a vessel outside the bar supposed to be the Almy which has been lost for some time.

From Victoria.—The steamer Gussie Telfair arrived from Victoria at half past two o'clock yesterday morning. Left Victoria on Sunday Oct 17th, passed steamer G S Wright in Straits; passed [illegible] at Straits at 1 30 P M, crossed the bar at 9 30 P M the 18th, left Astoria at 12 M and arrived at Portland 1 30 A M the 19th. The following is her list of passengers: A Harman, William Peters, E Bartlett, Mrs Richards and 6 children, G W Jamison and son, J C Mealey, J L Robb, [illegible] Greeley, S Aiken, Thomas Ball, Capt W Sprig, J C H Hadey, C W McLean, W B Beck, James Foley, F Sheldon, 8 Chinamen and 4 Indians.

New Style of Currency.—A [illegible] at Scottsburg sends us what he calls the new style of Oregon greenback in payment for a year's subscription to the Weekly Oregonian for a friend. The greenback is a well executed photograph of the sender with a [illegible] inlaid in the bust. As the writer says this style of money makes paper as good as gold. All our friends are at liberty to send us their photographs in like manner, for which we will send the Weekly or Daily Oregonian at advertised rates.

Unpleasant Notice from Vancouver.—Mr J R M[illegible], Secretary of the Clarke County Agricultural Society writes under date of yesterday as follows: "I learn with regret and surprise that some one says positively and [illegible] giving publicity to it, that the Clarke County Fair this year will be a comparative failure. As things look now (Tuesday afternoon) it will be an entire success. You will oblige the Clarke County Agricultural and Mechanical Society as well as the undersigned by making this communication public."

From Vancouver.—We received last evening the following special dispatch to the Oregonian:

"Vancouver, Oct 19th 1869.—The fair commences to-morrow. Farmers, mechanics and sporting men are making great preparations. The fair will be a success. Portland mechanics and agents of agricultural implements who have made arrangements to bring their wares here will have a good opportunity to exhibit them. The Grand Lodge of Good Templars commences its session here to-day. About seventy five delegates have arrived."

A Good Suggestion.—The Statesman recommends to the business men of Salem and vicinity to donate funds enough to the State Agricultural Society to enable it to effect a general renovation of the grounds and buildings. We second the motion. But if the means cannot be raised in that way, the Society will find it remunerative in the end, to go in debt for that purpose. The Pavilion needs enlarging and there should be a general "clean up" before the opening of the next fair.

Chief Among Takers of Premiums.—Mr John W Lewis of Oregon City was the largest exhibitor in the mechanical department of the late fair—a fact which we inadvertently omitted in our reports. He took a twenty dollar premium for the exhibition of the greatest number of machines and implements having taken no less than eleven prizes. A part of the articles were entered by Mr Lewis alone; and part by Lewis & Pollock. Mr L.'s record as connected with this fair is one, certainly, to be proud of.

Mistake in the Print.—We made an unintentional mistake in our item yesterday morning in regard to the name of the person who is said to threaten the P T Co with a suit for damages. We called him in one place "Jack Williams" when the name should have been Dan Williams. Jack Williams is a penitentiary convict and as Dan. Williams is quite another person; he naturally does not wish the two names mixed up in that way, nor would we have done it intentionally.

In Probate Court.—Judge Marquam has appointed A B Halleck administrator of the estate of Wm McMillion, deceased, fixing his bond at $40,000. The bond has been filed, with proper sureties. Messrs Hamilton Boyd, Wm Cree and Shubrick Norris have been appointed appraisers of the property of the estate. No will of the deceased has been discovered, though it was supposed by many of his friends that he had made one.

Furs for Winter Wear.—We invite particular attention to the card of Mr C. E. Dubois, who has opened a fur establishment on Washington street, between First and Second. He has a good stock of all the most fashionable goods, many articles of which are rich and beautiful. The ladies should give him a call and examine his handsome cloaks, collars, muffs, etc.

Entertainment at Oregon City.—Prof Morey, we understand, will give an entertainment at Oregon City to-night, consisting of tricks in magic, ventriloquism, etc. He has drawn fair to full houses here, a sufficient testimonial to the interesting character of his exhibitions.

Tom Thumb and Party.—These wonderful little people exhibited yesterday afternoon at the Circus Pavilion, to a large audience. They took their departure in the evening, on board the steamer Oriflamme for San Francisco.

Outside the Bar.—When the Gussie Telfair came over the bar on Monday a heavy laden bark was seen on the outside, supposed to be the H. W. Almy.

Wanted.—A situation to do general housework. Enquire between Columbia and Clay on Fourth street.

Everybody is out shopping these days, and it is just the time to get the Fall and Winter Styles. It is almost impossible to pass the splendid store of KOHN & FISHEL, No 91, Front street, without being drawn in by the attraction of those charming New Suits, and the enormous piles of elegant clothing and fancy goods of every description and quality. They have, unquestionably, the largest stock and best assortment of goods that can be found in the city of Portland. Messrs Kohn & Fishel bring their goods direct from New York, and sell as cheap as the cheapest.

Use KANE'S IMPERIAL CONDENSED SOAP. It washes without rubbing. For sale by Allen & Lewis, Corbitt & McCleay, R G Sneath and all retailers.

DR. H. A. BODMAN

HAVING PURCHASED HADFIELD'S EQUALIZER and the Patent Right for Multnomah county would respectfully inform his friends and the public generally that he is prepared to treat fully those Chronic cases on whom all other means of cure have failed.

Having used this Instrument in connection with his medical practice for about three months, he is satisfied that it will accomplish all that is claimed for it in curing Chronic Disease. He does not believe in the system of advertising cases cured, but any number of such may be seen on record at his office, consisting principally of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Paralysis, Curvature of the Spine, Nervous Debility, Dyspepsia, Weak Chests, Asthma, Narrow Chests, Weak Lungs, Weak Backs, Weak, Stiff and Rheumatic Limbs, Sciatica, Sparrow, Epilepsy, Palsy, St. Vitus Dance, Prolapsus Uteri, Obstructed Menstruation, with all their consequent [illegible], Impotency and all kinds of weakness of the Generative Organs. Spermatorrhoea confidently cured in from four to six weeks without medicine.

He uses other remedies when necessary, but the Equalizer generally performs the cure without the aid of any medicine whatever. It brings a great supply of blood and nutrition to all weak parts, thus creating new life and tone, and health, and strength to those parts. It breaks up congestion and inflammation by equalizing the circulation throughout every part of the body.

Give it a fair trial and you will be satisfied with the results. It has been examined by thousands of physicians of all Schools of Medicine, and there has not been one dissenting voice to the cure. These of the principals all acknowledge that it fills a vacuum in the science of Medicine.

How the World Runs.

A-cross the mead at even-tide
My path doth ever lie,
She to her summer-house hath hied,
And peeps as I pass by.
Of fixed appointments have we none
'Tis but the way the world should run.

How first it chanced I cannot guess,
I kiss her every day.
I ask no leave—she says not yes
But still she says not nay.
When lip on lip so eager lights,
Why should we pause in our delights?

The breeze that with the rosebud sports
Asks never, lovest thou me?
The rose which pearly dew-drops courts,
Says never, give to me!
So I love her, and she loves me,
Yet neither says, I love but thee!
—From the German of Uhland

An Army of Loafers.

(From the New York Times.)

A short time since an advertisement appeared in a morning journal, informing the public that a barkeeper was wanted at No. — Dey-st. Curious to see the effects of this demand, we took a position convenient for observation, and promptly at the hour designated in the advertisement the advanced guard of the army of employment-seekers began to arrive. We remained but half an hour, and in that short time counted seventy-five apparently able-bodied men and boys who made applications for the place.

The motley crew was worth the study we gave it, if for no other and higher reason than the gratification it gave to an artistic sense, by its varied and pronounced types of character. For example, there was the boy of 16, withered before his time by the dissipations of city life; young in years, but old in knowledge of that hard side of life which is learned only in great centres of population—in London or Paris or New York. Following close upon his heels came a member of the flash club, a handsome man of 30 years, dressed in good cloth, but "loud" in his adornments with highly colored cravat, a profusion of "oriade" jewelry, and suspiciously heavy watch, chain and charms—evidently a gentleman who had traveled with a circus, or held at one time a confidential position in a mock auction establishment. To him succeeded a venerable "cove," short and squat, with bulbous nose and shocking hat—a good representative of the seedy order of humanity, but unquestionably a man who had seen better days. Upon his steps trod a tall, gaunt, hungry-looking person, whose closely-buttoned coat concealed his linen—if linen he wore—and by its thread-bare and hard-brushed appearance, revealed a tale of genuine wretchedness—whether deserved or not, who could tell? Then came a broad-shouldered, red-faced man, his beard well dyed, and his manner full of assurance. He sauntered down the street with an air of unconcern, and when opposite the door, after casting a furtive glance behind and around, he darted up the stairs to try his luck and came down looking—though unsuccessful, more nonchalant than before. In the rear of this philosopher shambled along in a melancholy-looking creature who may have been a decayed clergyman or lawyer—at all events he had a clerkly look, and when he came out his face wore an expression of blank despair. Poor devil! he may have a wife and children waiting hungry in some garret for his return.

And so they came, and went—of all ages and every type of face and style of figure, from the keen-eyed boy to the battered and blear-eyed old toper; from the shabby loafer, whose bed is in the street or station-house, to the sharp, dapper-looking Broadway lounger, whose dress and manner lead the uninitiated to suppose him a gentleman of honest leisure. But the predominant type was that of the street adventurer—the class who live by their wits, who hover on the verge of a criminal career, and often cross the line. In one word, men who really belong to the dangerous classes of society: idlers, and, consequently, vagabonds in embryo. To the large majority of these fellows, hard, honest, manual labor is utterly distasteful. They will not work. They very willingly "tend bar"—for in that business there are so many opportunities to "shake down" comfortable sums, and even rise in the world. The fact being being well known that enterprising Americans have gone from "bar-keeping" to Congress, that there should be in all our large cities such multitudes of the unemployed, is a source of much anxiety to the social reformer and the political economist. For the evil they do there seems to be no remedy. It is within the scope of social science to discover a cure for evils of an overstocked labor market; but there is no remedy for the mischief done by the class we have designated. The constitutional loafer can only be dealt with by the vagrant officer, and he cannot wholly abate the nuisance.

Edgar A. Poe.

In one of the many letters which I received in England from Mr. Tupper, the poet-proverbialist, he says: "Shall we make Edgar Poe famous by a notice in the Literary Gazette?" referring to the volume of "Poe's Tales" which Mr. Willey has printed in our Library of American Books, and which I had given to the poet as novelties. These tales have a weird kind of fascination, which made me curiously interested in the author, whom I had never seen. Another incident enhanced this interest. At our London office we had received, about 1840, a volume called The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym, of Nantucket, which, in a long title page perported to describe sundry veritable voyages, ending in one in which the author had reached the 84th parallel of southern altitude. The late D. Appleton was sitting in our office in Paternoster Row. "Here is an American contribution to geographical science." I said to him, "this man has reached a higher latitude than any European navigator. Let us reprint this for the benefit of Mr. Bull." He assented, and took half share in the venture. The grave particularity of the title and of the narrative misled many of the critics as well as ourselves and whole columns of these new "discoveries" including the hieroglyphics (!) found on rocks, were copied by many of the English country papers as sober historical truth. Whether such a work were as justifiable as Robinson Crusoe may be questioned—it was certainly ingenious and skillful.

Some years after, when my desk was in Broadway, in separate quarters, a gentleman with a somewhat nervous and excited manner claimed attention on a subject which he said was of the highest importance. Seated at my desk, and looking at me a full minute with his "glittering eye," he at length said, "I am Mr. Poe." I was "all ear," of course, and sincerely interested. It was the author of The Raven and of The Gold Bug. "I hardly know," said the poet, after a pause, "how to begin with what I have got to say. It is a matter of profound importance." After another pause, the poet seemed to be in a tremor of excitement, he at length went on to say that the publication he had to propose was of momentous interest. Newton's discovery of gravitation was a mere incident compared to the discoveries revealed in this book. It would at once command such universal and intense attention that the publisher might give up all other enterprises, and make this one book the sole business of his lifetime. An edition of fifty thousand might be sufficient to begin with, but it would be but a small beginning. No other scientific event in the history of the world approached in importance the original developments of this book. All this and more, not in irony or in jest; but in intense interest, for he held me with his eye, like the Ancient Mariner. I was really impressed—but not overcome. Promising a decision on Monday, (it was late Saturday afternoon), the poet had to rest so long in uncertainty about the extent of the edition—partly reconciled by a small loan meanwhile. We did venture, not upon fifty thousand, but five hundred.

This little book of "great expectations," was simply Eureka, a New Theory of the Universe—which Mr. Poe had read as a lecture to a small audience at the Society Library. A Southern magazine, the Nineteenth Century, gave recently a high estimate of the theory or discovery announced in Eureka—but it has never, apparently, caused any profound interest either to popular or scientific readers.—Geo. P. Putnam.

COMPUTING INTEREST. The Chicago Journal gives a new rule for computing interest, and says it is so simple and so true that every banker, broker, merchant or clerk should post it up for reference. By no other mathematical process can the desired information be obtained by so few figures:

Six per cent. Multiply any given number of dollars by the number of days of interest desired, separate the right hand figure and divide by six, the result is the true interest on such number of days at six per cent.

Eight per cent. Multiply any given amount by the number of days upon which it is desired to ascertain the interest, and divide by forty-five and the result will be the interest of such for the time required, at eight per cent.

Ten per cent.—Multiply the same as above and divide by thirty-six, and the result will show the rate of interest at ten per cent.
